MEUUS Circle – Your Career Journey

How do you move through your career whilst picking up valuable experience, insight and capabilities?

This Month's MEUUS Circle Discussion

This month we discussed how you move through your career picking up behavioural and technical skills along the way. We examined how to construct your career journey to enable you to develop a tool kit of skills and capabilities that would make you more marketable to industry.

We touched on the GROW model and the technical and behavioural competencies required. We also discovered how when you move up in your career, the more competent you need to be, but also the more you need to understand who you are and what your strengths and weak spots are. If you are leading a team and you understand your weak spots, you can compensate them with your team members. The more senior you go, the more important is it for you to be approachable and be open to two way communication. We know that actions speak louder than words and this is very much the case when you are leading a team. Your team, peers and executives will look more at what you do than what you say.

Discover the MEUUS Circle for yourself

At our next circle, we will be looking at how we create an “agile” workplace. This is using the key elements of the “Agile” methodology that was created for software development.
